This document contains important information about installation, new features, and known limitations of Data Transformation Agent for IBM Integration Bus. Do not upgrade to this release from a previous version without carefully reading the relevant sections on upgrading and bug fixes, since bug fixes might change the behavior of existing transformations. For more information about the product, consult the documentation and online help.

CHAPTER 1

New Features

Data Transformation 10.1 Agent for IBM Integration Bus works with IBM Integration Bus version 10.

CHAPTER 2

Known Limitations

You might encounter the following limitations when you use the Data Transformation Agent for IBM Integration Bus.

If you encounter difficulties or have further questions regarding these limitations, contact Informatica Global Customer Support and reference the CR number. For more information, see the Data Transformation Agent for IBM Integration Bus User Guide.

The following table describes known limitations:

CR	Description

CM-5747	The Failure Terminal Output setting does not affect the following types of errors:
	- Errors that originate from the IBM Integration Bus API.
	- Errors from the CM Transformer node that do not originate from Data Transformation Engine, for example,
	  - A required attribute is not set, such as the name of the service to run.
	  - Could not convert the output to XML.
	  - Could not recognize the format of the input message.
	These types of errors throw a IBM Integration Bus exception.
	On Windows machines, you can view the error messages through the Windows Event Log. On Linux machines, you can view the error messages in the IBM Integration Bus log file.
